Helping us help others on Leicester City Centre Streets

What do Street Pastors do?

Leicester City Centre is bursting with people spilling out onto the streets from the pubs and clubs. Our Street Pastors are out Friday and Saturday nights to be on hand for those who may need our help. This could be giving a blanket to someone sleeping rough and talking with them, offering a pair of flip-flops to a young woman carrying her shoes so that she doesn't cut her feet, helping someone get transport home or waiting with them until a friend or family member comes, or simply chatting with people out for a good night. It has also been possible to help defuse arguments in or around the late night refreshment venues or act as useful witnesses of incidents for the police. We particularly care for vulnerable people but we also make a point of simply chatting with groups of friends who have come into the city centre to enjoy themselves.

Over the years that we have been operating we have built up relationships with bar and club managers, taxi firms and the local police. We have been very warmly received by the public, and the police and Local Authority have supported us from the beginning.

A lot of people who have come to know us and what we do have realised that we offer practical help and that we are not out preaching. We find that we are often asked about our faith since people like to ask why we volunteer to be out on the streets so late. They also appreciate that we leave it for them to bring up conversation about religion or faith if they want to. We often have some very good conversations in the early hours of the morning. All our Street Pastors come from a variety of churches so this is truly an ecumenical ministry. On the nights we are on duty we try to be in the midst of society and the problems people may face by taking church to the streets. We hope to make a difference for the benefit of all who use our city centre late at night.

We always welcome new enquiries. If you would like to find out more about becoming a Street Pastor or Prayer Pastor email leicester@streetpastors.org.uk or phone our office on 0116 255 4111.
